Local Infirmary

conductor Paul Johnson of the Elba Special flew in the Blackhawk Infirmary at the point of death as a result of a bullet wound received last night when he was fired upon by Bill Hastings of Pinehills, the attain occurring as the train stopped at that place. Reported this afternoon at 2 o'clock from the bedside of Mr Johnson are to the effect that although he is still conscious his chances for recovery are slight.

Hainslips has been arrested and taken to Ozark where he was lodged in the Pyle county jail. He will be given a preliminary hearing in

Hollings was returning home yesterday afternoon from Bolinas where he attended the circus, and according to the conductor was sitting row 19, fifth train a window on the south side of the train a window referred him to a special agent of the road who made an attempt to quiet him but Hastings demanded an apology from the conductor, he was refused. Later, Mr. Johnson came through collecting fares and

It is said that Hlatky refused to provide any further information, still declaring that the former would make amends for reporting him Mr Johnson continued "through the car and as he alighted to assist the passengers. If the truth be told, the shooting was a result of a quarrel and pulling his pistol drew the bullet striking the conductor in the stomach and going through the lodging in the back. The intestines were perforated by the bullet, which was from a 44 calibre pistol, and owing to this fact the wound has been considered almost fatal."

The shooting Johnson was placed on train coming from Montgomery brought to Ithaca where he been receiving medical aid. The wounded man's wife and children were aboard the train return to their home in Ithaca from both where they also attended the el of yesterday and they returned Ithaca city with him.

DON'T FEEL A WHOLE LOT ABOUT THE TIME

Most anybody can get a job. It is not a hard thing to do. You just go out and look for one. You will find it. You will find it. You will find it.

Who knows, perhaps it is all over the country and we could use more of them. But if you are a jobber, you must not pay close attention.

You ought to study your job. Try to find out why it should be done in this place and not in that one. You can make it in ten minutes and what they are probably worth to the man trying for the blackboard looks.

As you put the book, keep your eyes open. And to time you should be able to take the place of the man who tells you where to dump it and where to look. He may get sick and you can get it out of him. If you come up, don't get up. You probably will be given a little rest to take around on the other side of the building to get that is, if you have observed it. It is not much stuff to be in.

I get hour by hour and the best way to do it.

Pushing a wheelbarrow is not a hard job. But then one should have a good ambition. You have to push a wheelbarrow in pushing a wheelbarrow. How recovers, who have never learned to crank of a wheelbarrow can come along and take your place.

The quickest way to run your car is to where it makes the boss to tell figuring to keep you in to learn to do something, that every Tom, Dick and Harry can do as well as you.

Somebody will ask after a while where they can get such and such a man, to do certain things. A dozen will speak up. I know where you can get such a man but you will have to pay big money to get him.

We believe it was Corry who applied at the steel mill for a job as a common laborer. And he was a common laborer and they put him to rolling a wheelbarrow. They found that he learned where to get his load and where to dump it, in a remarkably short time. For years now he has been telling the steel trust where to get the stuff and where to dump and they pay him a fortune for each year's work and he is no longer a common laborer.

About half of the real big rail road presidents of this country can take a round hammer and sink a railroad spike in an oak tree three quarters of an inch every day. They can pick up a shovel and tamp it in the rails a joint, or take two crowbars and four men and pull the wheels on an eight pound rail as quick as my section Jerry on the line.

They feared where to dump and where to load. They didn't pump a hammer out every morning at sun rise long, before the foreman made them track wipers who carry a few spikes and a light hammer and a wrench, to tighten up a rail here or there, when they found something giving away.

Such men get a section foreman's job and feel reasonably satisfied for a time, but they keep studying the others of unloading and a section foreman is transferred or promoted and he is over the place and then the section foreman and on for his man. He has transferred the home office. The foreman is in the end of the line. The man who is in the end of the line is the best and the worst of the section.

Then comes later, when he is in the line with the notables of the town terminals to partly in the ceremony of driving the last spike—the golden spike—a christening the event of finishing a new road when he is handed a drink with new hammer and the golden spike he reaches over and takes a nail from the hands of a section man and what he does for that little golden spike is a plenty.

The mayor the congressman and all the big guns assembled at the founded that the president would hammer like a Mexican section hand not knowing that he served his apprentice pushing the wheelbarrow, tamping the driving spikes pulling, track back into line and cutting wheels on the right of way long, long before he was called up at the front door.

ANOTHER LOSS APT

In a recent article on complaint against the late Mr. Charles N. Gould, one of the old and distinguished citizens of Dothan, it was stated that he had died at the age of 80.

Letter to The Editor

Dothan Ala Nov 1 1931

Editor Dothan Eagle

Your article in yesterday's paper relative to an electric line was read with much interest by the writer. Being a great believer in the future of Dothan, it seems to me that what we need most is a good electric line.

Without proper lines we cannot expect to grow as we should. When a good electric line is put in, it will be the first question asked is: What are your light rates? and the answer should be: we are very low. I don't think I can put in this line. It takes on to other towns where it can compete with other electric lines. For the electric line to be a success for the benefit of Dothan is a waste of time and money.

Since we are only twenty miles from the Chattahoochee River, why not build an electric railway to Columbus, six corners and Ashford? This would not only give us water connection with the outside world, but would also give us additional railway connections with the T. & N. at Graceville, Fla. The General Lumber Company, a Cowarts hauls both passengers and freight to Columbus and Graceville. We would then have four railroads leading out of Dothan. In addition to the advantages of the electric line. With these inducements to manufacturers, we should have no trouble in having a number of industries locate here with a possibility of doubling and tripling our population within the next five years.

There is ample capital and brains in Dothan to make this a success, and I trust that the question will be applied until we will not only have an electric line to the Chattahoochee, but that we will have a network of lines all over this section making Dothan a city of 20,000 in 1935.

Planned Humor

Dr. Frederick Van Dine, the Dutch physician and author, always kept in about the history of late that subjects the poet to various from which he drew the humor. He told the following story after dinner, which occurred during the student days in Amsterdam.

One of his friends was brought in, dressed with a very strange and rare device of the spine that caused him to be up and continue laughing when he tried to stand on his legs. Our professor wanted to show this to his students, and he requested the patient to stand on his feet. The poor man looked at the crowd around him and with a grateful, unspoken look.

If the audience will please not laugh," the professor promised they would be serious. And yet when the man began to limp the gentlemen roared. And I felt the tears come to my eyes and my fists close in my pockets—World's Work.

A Greenland Duel

It is rather a pity for the galaxy of nations that French men, of letters cannot fight their duels as duels are fought in Greenland. In Greenland when one man has been insulted by another the adversaries each compose a satire in verse. This each man recites to his household until the servants and the women know it by heart. Then a place of meeting is appointed. The two men, the inviter and the invited, the offender and the offended stand face to face and each recites his poem. His friends and servants form a chorus. Each man tries hard to raise the laugh against his adversary. Each man speaks in turn, whipping the enemy with epigrams and quips and after two hours of this wordy battle the meeting gives the victory to him of the two adversaries who has named the whole assembly most.

Colored His Sermons

"A minister has a lot to be alive and resourceful today," said a deacon of a big metropolitan church. "Our flock here can't speak well except in metaphors, and he reads from a type-written copy. I never knew how he managed to preach so effectively until one day it happened to see his manuscript. All of it was underlined in different colors. It looked so curious that I asked him about it."

"A little scheme of mine," he said laughingly. "I found I was delivering what I had written in the same tone. So now, early on Sunday morning, I go over the copy I carry into the pulpit. I keep crayon points of six different colors on my desk. Red means one tone, green yet another yellow and blue yet others. As I turn each page I see at a glance just how I am to speak."—New York Sun

Secret Societies.

Secret societies are so ancient that their origin is lost in the mists of the past. They existed in Egypt, Persia, India, and the earliest traces with which history or legend gives us any insight. It seems to be natural for man to organize such societies for both good and evil purposes. Nearly all the ancient religions were of a type that characterized regular and secret or as they are called, "mystic" and "esoteric." At first for the few, the initiated, the secret for the rank and file. The philosophers would teach nothing to the masses of the people, and another to the select few who made up the inner circle. I now tell you that the whole man of I know of a Greek reflected quite of "mystic" in the common run of Greeks and Romans.

COTTON PRICE COULD BE DOUBLED, SAYS FRANK
B. HAYNE

New Orleans La. Oct 31—At the banquet tendered here last night to the delegates to the cotton conference Frank B. Hayne the well known cotton bull's speculator and member of the so-called bull pool of 1909 now under indictment in the federal courts of New York for alleged violation of the anti-trust laws uttered the southern refrain that he would gladly go to jail if he felt in any way that the cotton crop of the South

Mr. Hayne spoke with marked emotion and the applause which greeted his remarks spoke plainly the feeling of kindred which those present had for him

Along with William I. Brown of New Orleans Eugene Hale of Texas and James A. Patton of Chicago said Mr. Hayne I was indicted by a federal grand jury in New York on the plea of having unduly added $60,000,000 to the value of cotton in the south. It is some compensation to take it before an audience of this kind the crime with which I am charged do not bring upon me any disgrace

Proud of Sentence

"I shall be proud to go to jail if I have in any way aided in the enhancement of the value of the south's product. But if what we did in New York is decided to be a violation of the law I say God help the southern farmer. It would mean that the man who sells and sells what he has not got is to be praised and that the man who buys to help the people among whom he lived is to be condemned government in these United States has come to a pretty pass

Before this audience I feel that I will not be credited with purely selfish motives in any of the canjagers with which I have been associated in the so called building of the market

Mr. Hayne said it plain that he believed in higher prices for cotton today no less than he had last year or the year previous

Crop Depreciating

The south this year said Mr. Hayne probably will receive $2,000,000,000 less for its crop of cotton than she received for the crop of the year previous. Those figures are astounding, yet the presentment of the country regarding them is measure. The press and the public stand aghest at the announcement of a reduction of $6 a share in steel stock representing a paper loss of $100,000,000 yet that loss may be only temporary and with a subsequent rise in the price of steel will be fully recouped. On the other hand every bale of cotton which has been marketed to date this year at the ridiculously low prices obtaining represents a loss to the farmer and to the south which cannot be retrieved. This year the south has lost the gigantic sum of $2,000,000,000 in that manner and the world apparently thinks nothing of the loss. The newspapers of the country even the southern papers print columns about the decline in steel stocks but we hear very little about these far greater and permanent losses sustained by the farmers of the south

Why is the soda cracker to-day such a universal food?

People ate soda crackers in the old days, it is true—but they bought them from a barrel or box and took them home in a paper bag, their crispness and flavor all gone.

To-day there is a soda cracker which is the recognized staple — Uneeda Biscuit.

Uneeda Biscuit are the most nutritious food made from flour and should be eaten every day by every member of the family from the youngest to the oldest.

Uneeda Biscuit—soda crackers better than any ever made before—made in the greatest bakeries in the world—baked to perfection—packed to perfection—kept to perfection until you take them, oven-fresh and crisp, from their protecting package.

Conductor P. Johnson Shot By W. Hastings

at Plunkard several months ago. It will be remembered by the Eagle readers that Hastings came to Plunkard several months ago and after getting fairly well intoxicated, started to return home in his auto, making the time at a high rate of speed before he reached home that evening he ran his car into an old man in a hurry, to cross the river in over and badly injuring the occupant. He proceeded to Plunkard, where more roadwork took place and where on the next day he was heavily fined in police court for cursing female, reckless driving and other offenses. Hastings, who is about 50 years of age, is said to have been very wealthy at one time.

Conductor Johnson is one of the most popular conductors the A. C. L. carries, both with the commercial travelers and other traveling public. He has been running into Dothan since the Elba branch was extended to this city and has many friends here.

A Summer Without Nights.

To the summer visitor in Sweden there is nothing more striking than the almost total absence of night. At Stockholm, the Swedish capital, the sun goes down a few minutes before 10 o'clock and rises again four hours later during a greater part of the month of June. But the four hours the sun lies hidden in the frozen north are not hours of darkness. The refraction of the rays as he passes around the north pole makes midnight as light as a cloudy midday and enables one to read the finest print without artificial light at any time during the "night."

Destined for the front. A somewhat striking story dealing with the post office conventional soldier, Laraki, or "happy dispatch," once common in Japan, was once told by a French Admiral Gourdon. When he was a young man he had a comrade who, having assisted in the overthrow of the Japanese navy, was subsequently raised to the rank of admiral in that force. He took the part of the tycoon against the mikado in the revolutionary war and, having been captured, was tried by court martial and sentenced to death. When, however, the fatal sword was presented to him he fully refused to kill himself and declared that if he was to be somebody else must kill him. Threats and entreaties alike proved unavailing. He resolutely refused. The emperor of Japan was scandalized at such immoral behavior, which, however, saved his life. The Japanese court could have never contemplated such a contingency as a man infamous enough to refuse the barakiri, and in the end he was banished from the country and returned to France.

The Martinet.

"The martinet never succeeds. A typical martinet was the well known one who, having ordered his men to change their shirts and then, having learned that they had no shirts, changed, said in that event they must change shirts with each other. I heard yesterday of still another type of martinet."

The speaker was an old West Pointer, says the Washington Star. He continued: "This chap, a captain, strode up to one of his men and said, with a fearful frown: "Who's the idiot that ordered you to leave that mess of unspiced meat cans right here in front of headquarters?" "It was the colonel, sir," the man replied.

"Very well then," said the captain sharply. "Let it stay there. And your leave's stopped for a week, my man, for calling your colonel an idiot."

Roadless Russia.

Russia is a roadless land. It is inconceivable to the foreign visitor who has ever left the beaten track of the highways in Russia that a great number of roads exist so long and so successfully amid the competition of the rival states beyond its borders without even a pretense at roads.

The secret, of course, lies in the fact that for five or six months in the year nature herself provides roads over the greater part of the expanse of all the Russias, admirably smooth, glassy roadways over hard worn snow. The traffic is further cheapened over these roads by the substitution of a sledge runner for the wheel and axle. This brings the cost of land carriage on near the cheapness of water borne freight as possible, and it is the principal reason why Russia in the twentieth century is still a roadless land.—London Standard.

Wrong Interpretation.

A city official tells of a conversation he and a Spanish maiden had when he was a sergeant, with troops stationed on the island of Porto Rico. "The sergeant," said the official, "had become infatuated with a certain soldier named Harry, and she had learned his name. One morning she approached me and asked: "Where Harry?" "He was asleep, and I laid my head on my hand and closed my eyes to tell the girl. She misunderstood the signs and, with a cry, pointed to heaven. I shook my head and pointed down. The sergeant raised her hands in silent supplication. Later Harry was seen on guard, and the girl looked at me reproachfully."—Indianapolis News.

Road to a Sure Death.

Jacques de Chastel, bishop of Soles, had accompanied Louis IX. (St. Louis) on the African crusade and, finding that nothing had been accomplished and that the army was about to return in disgrace to France, refused to go, took leave of his friends, partook of the sacrament, mounted his horse fully equipped for battle and, in sight of the whole army, charged alone into the Saracen camp, where he was at once cut to pieces.

A Vast Difference.

Young Hopeful—Father, what is a traitor in politics? Veteran Politician—A traitor is a man who leaves our party and goes over to the other one. Young Hopeful—Well, then, what is a man who leaves his party and comes over to yours? Veteran Politician—A convert, my son.—London Tit-Bits.

His View.

Willis—Do you think a man should be allowed to hold the highest honor in the United States more than four years? Gills—Sure thing! I say, if a man can top the league to hitting for ten or even fifteen years, let him stay in the game for the good of the sport.—Puck.

Time to Quit.

"I used to sing quite a little," said Mr. Cumrox. "How did you come to quit?" "I began to take notice that the audience was inclined to appear sad at the couple songs and look fidgeted at the pathetic ballads."—Washington Star.

Fairly Warned.

"Won't you try a piece of my wife's angel cake?" "Will it make an angel of me?" "That will depend on the kind of the you have led."—Hudson Post.

gard to the "poor old tiger" with of interest in view of the fact that such strenuous arguments were put forth during the recent local election fight that high licensed saloons would do away with that evil. Letter of Revocation. The letter follows:

"October 31, 1911.
"Mr. Julius Mann,
"Pres. Four Oaks Distilling Co.,
"City:

"Dear sir,—In the hearing of your case before the commission it has been found that you are guilty of a gross violation of the law, and rules laid down by this commission. You are also guilty of gross ignorance of the law, to propostions is comprehend.

"Your license is, therefore, revoked. The revocation of which is a punishment within the meaning of the constitution, but because of violations of the law you have shown that you are not a proper person to hold a license.

"In this hearing you have acknowledged to gross violations of the law, and only undertake to excuse yourself for a part of them by laying the blame at the door of another member and employee of your firm. The violation of the law which forfeits a license does not mean necessarily a personal violation by the certificate holder and head of the firm or corporation, but also includes a violation by any agent in the course of his duty.

Licenses Rescinded. "While the system of regulation of intoxicating liquors grants the licensee the privilege of conducting his business through an agent, it also imposes on the licensee the affirmative duty to see to it that every regulation is obeyed by his agent, as well as himself, and such a license is unanswerable for the acts of his agents though he is absent from this place of business and had instructed such agents not to make forbidden sales.

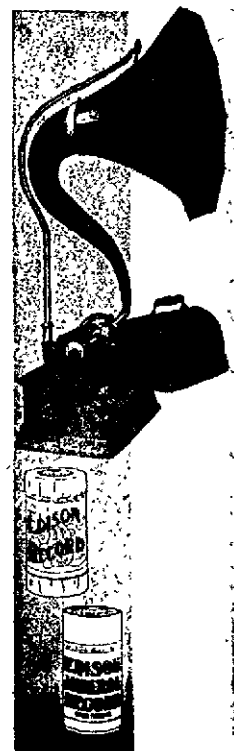

"It is the ruling of this commission that your doors be closed at 10 o'clock p. m., today, and you will be allowed to make further sales after that hour. Six days will be granted in which to dispose of stock now on hand to licensed dealers in Jefferson county, or goods may be shipped out of the state, such disposition to be made under supervision of this commission.

Yours truly,
"W. C. AGEE,
"Chairman of Excise Commission of Jefferson county."
